

Postdoctoral Research Associate

The Stanford History Education Group (SHEG), an award-winning educational research and development group at Stanford University, has an opportunity for a postdoctoral research associate beginning in Fall 2012. The researcher will work closely with a small team of Stanford faculty and graduate students to explore issues related to on-line learning environments and will be integral to our effort to create innovative on-line platforms for delivering inquiry-based curriculum materials to history teachers. Applicants will also have opportunities to collaborate with SHEG associates on on-going research projects regarding history teaching and new forms of assessment.

Applicants must be interested in how history is taught and learned, either in schools or in digital environments. Candidates must have a doctoral degree by the start date. Well-qualified candidates will have a strong background in one of the following fields: history (or related humanities discipline), web design, learning sciences, or education.

This will be a 12-month position with full benefits.

Applicants should learn about us at <http://sheg.stanford.edu> and submit a CV and a one-page cover letter to:

Sam Wineburg

Margaret Jacks Professor of Education

Professor of History (by courtesy)

Stanford University

wineburg@stanford.edu